

KEY FACTS

Investment Objective

The Fund's objective is to generate investment returns by investing in companies that are focused on the growth in consumption and services in emerging markets. The portfolio provides exposure to this philosophy through active stock picking based on a fundamental bottom-up approach with disciplined analytics and an awareness of macro factors. The focus is on growth companies, which are domiciled, or carrying out the main part of their economic activity, in an emerging market country. The Fund is suitable for investors seeking long term capital appreciation.

MANAGER COMMENTARY

April has seen a dramatic rebound from the lows of March with the Fund rebounding sharply by 19.1%, exceeding the index rise of 14.7%. While the oil price has remained volatile and elevated, the ceasefire and attempted peace negotiations have returned calm to stock markets across the world, with attention refocussing on technology and AI related stocks.

The Korean semiconductor stocks rebounded particularly strongly with SK Hynix rising 59% and Samsung Electronics a relatively more sedate 32%. Taiwanese technology shares were also very strong with Delta Electronics rising another 57% and the two new holdings bought in March, Bizlink and Asia Vital, making very strong starts, rising 59% and 42%, respectively. MediaTek, however, was the standout, climbing 75%. Their results for the latest quarter were not exciting, since these are still dominated by mobile phone related revenues which are declining from a high base last year. Instead, it was the release of more details of the new Tensor Processing Unit business for Google that moved the stock. This may not kick in until 2027 or 2028, but the potential revenues are transformational for the business.

Reverting to Korea, and SK Hynix in particular, it remains a challenge to put a value on these normally cyclical memory stocks. From December 2025 to the end of April, the stock price has risen almost exactly 100%. But to put that in some context, the expected EPS for this year has risen by 197% and for next year by 266%, so in simple terms, the stock has derated. The bigger point is that, despite these sharp stock price moves, there are strong underlying profits supporting them. This is reflected in the portfolio's valuation, which has only moved from 0.7x PEG last month to 0.8x now.

There have been many more results across the portfolio with no major surprises. Laureate, the leading university educator in Mexico and Peru, produced excellent results but proved to be one of the few negative performers for the month. This was partly due to warnings of a mild slowdown in Mexico in the second half, and partly due to political concerns in Peru with a general election runoff expected in June.

The Chinese and Indian markets have both had a relatively calm month. In India, drinks company Radico Khaitan rose 30% as the political winds seem to be blowing back in their direction. Uttar Pradesh announced dramatically streamlined regulations and rumours emerged that Bihar may end years of prohibition. Modi's BJP has emerged stronger than ever from recent state polls but, unusually, this was greeted with a shrug, at least for now.

Despite the strong move in the month, valuations still look extremely attractive, as mentioned, and the returns, cashflow and balance sheet metrics we use are as strong as they have ever been. Should a resolution in the Middle East result in normalised energy prices, this should allow the rally to broaden out into more domestically orientated sectors.
